Jerusalem, February, 2008

Dear Guests,

Welcome to the Global Forum for Combating Antisemitism. We are proud to host you here in Jerusalem, the capital of the State of Israel, as we mark our 60th anniversary of independence.

This conference takes place at a time of great significance. Concerned observers everywhere see that Antisemitism and its attendant maladies have become a global phenomenon, ready to spread their toxic fumes at any given moment. While Antisemitism has taken many different forms in the course of its long history, it found ultimate expression with the extermination of European Jewry in the Holocaust. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry for Diaspora Affairs and Combating Antisemitism have joined forces in order to fight Antisemitism in its newest manifestations, in the guise of Anti-Zionist and anti-Israel standpoints.

The Jewish people and the State of Israel, which was established as its national home, stand at the forefront of this battle. Yet responsibility lies with the political and religious leadership of every country in which Antisemitism appears.

Antisemitism, racism and xenophobia are issues with which the countries of the free world must deal and which they must place high on the international agenda. We recognize and welcome the many leaders who have come to our side in order to change the situation and who have shown great sensitivity to concerns within the Jewish world.

The participation of such a diverse group at this Global Forum is testimony to the commitment of many governments and organizations and their resolve to eradicate Antisemitism through the appropriate tools and action plans. The progress we have seen in recent years within many governments, and the willingness to give prominence to Antisemitism in public discourse, we believe, represent important steps in creating a society that is more tolerant, just and value-oriented. In our opinion, the solution lies within three central themes: education, legislation and enforcement.

In taking a strong stand against Antisemitism, racism and xenophobia, we form a common front against the threats wrought by ignorance, fundamentalist extremism and against the xenophobic regimes in countries which support terrorism – threats which target the free world in general and the Jewish people in particular.

We must also take a strong stand against legitimizing UN-member states or leaders so long as they deny Israel's right to exist while also promoting denial of the Holocaust. Granting any kind of legitimacy works against everything this conference stands for.

We call upon you, as participants in this conference and as representatives of the free world, to lead a joint initiative to establish an international body uniting governments, leaders and representatives of the global community – to come together in the fight against Antisemitism along with racism and xenophobia, through making use of all available means.

The Government of Israel will continue its role as a leading force in these matters. We will do this in cooperation and coordination with all other states and organizations which share the same goals and which are willing to take part in this global effort.

With sincere wishes for a productive conference,

The Co-Chairs of the Global Forum for Combating Antisemitism

Tzipi Livni
Vice Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs

Isaac Herzog
Minister for Diaspora Affairs and for Combating Antisemitism

A Tribute to the late Congressman Tom Lantos

The Government of Israel expresses its deepest sorrow over the passing of US House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Tom Lantos.

Lantos was a notable leader in the advancement of Israel-US relations in the US Congress. Space does not permit the listing of all of his initiatives and actions on this issue during his long years of public service. Love of Israel, a commitment to advancing human rights and enshrining the memory of the Holocaust were the principal causes to which Tom Lantos dedicated his public and political activity over the years.

The people of Israel owe a great debt to Lantos, who made the advancement of Israel-US relations and activity on behalf of the Jewish People his life's work.

From Jerusalem, the State of Israel sends its sincerest condolences to the family of Tom Lantos. May his memory be blessed.

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

It is a great pleasure to welcome you to the Global Forum for Combating Antisemitism for our international conference.

The Global Forum for Combating Antisemitism is an active coalition of parliamentarians, statesmen, NGO's and scholars from many countries. Our mission is to fight the growing manifestations of Antisemitism and other forms of racism around the world. The international conference provides an opportunity for us to come together, exchange ideas and work effectively in concert as we confront Antisemitism's growing threat.

This year's conference will provide a full overview encompassing a focus on areas of concern ranging from geographic regions, recent trends and patterns such as Antisemitism in the guise of Anti-Zionism, to current government and parliamentary actions in combating Antisemitism and other models of best practice.

One of the important goals before us is to ensure the creation of a standing body with the tools to continue this fight for as long as the pressing need persists. Therefore, the information exchanged between you on an informal level during the conference is no less vital than the panel sessions. The personal contacts and networking we develop are invaluable in that they reinforce the connection that make the Global Forum an increasingly effective body in confronting Antisemitism in its growing virulence.

As we gather at this time of growing threats, it is hard to behold current manifestations of hatred and incitement without a sense of déjà vu. It should be inconceivable that a mere two generations after the Holocaust we are facing a new virulent and global outbreak of Antisemitism, yet this is the reality and we cannot afford to ignore it. We must do everything possible to heighten awareness of the campaigns of rhetoric, delegitimation and violence so that never again can there be another Holocaust. We must confront and defeat this and every other form of racism.

Only a coalition of informed and involved individuals from around the world, representing the full range of governmental, NGO and civil society organizations, can counter such a challenge – and it is just such a coalition that we see within the Global Forum for Combating Antisemitism. Through this exchange and its unique blend of academic and practical discourse, we can work together to confront and educate against Antisemitism and toward solutions to the many challenges ahead.

With best wishes for productive and fruitful discussions,
